

SOUTHERN WOMAN HIS ONLY LOVE, CRUIKSHANK SAID

Mrs. Eleanor Wood of Harriman, Tenn., Knew Vanishing Engineer as "Douglas" Too.

Believed to Be On Way Back
From Porto Rico; Due in New York Thursday.

It developed to-day that at least one person knew long before the denouement came of the dual personality of Capt. Barton Cruikshank, otherwise Donald Douglas, the man who was supposed to have been drowned in the St. Lawrence River two years ago, who turned up in this city a few days ago only to disappear again, and who was finally traced to San Juan, Porto Rico, from which port he is said to have sailed for New York.

This person is a mysterious "Eleanor," whose picture "Douglas" frequently showed to his associates in his office at No. 30 Church street, and to whom he referred as "the finest woman I ever knew."

"Eleanor," it now turns out, is Mrs. Eleanor Wood, whose home is at or near Harri-man, Tenn. She and Cruikshank had known each other for twenty years. The friendship began when Cruikshank went to Harri-man as consulting engineer of a big iron works there. Cruikshank was then unmarried.

While it is apparent Mrs. Wood knew the man both as Cruikshank and Douglas, there is nothing to show she was aware of the subsequent deception he practiced or that he tried to hide his first self under the waters of the St. Lawrence. It is probable she did not even know of his marriage.

HER LETTERS CAME THROUGH RAILROAD POST-OFFICE.

More than two months ago "Douglas" began to receive at his Church street office letters in a woman's handwriting. Most of them were postmarked "Railroad Post-office." As many as four or five letters came a week. From the way they were marked, those in Cruikshank's office are now of the opinion the writer must have been a traveling woman.

Soon after the first letters arrived "Douglas" showed his associates pictures of a woman. He was warm in his praise of her and declared she was the only woman he cared for and that frequently they had had pleasant times together in years back. He referred to her as the best horsewoman he ever saw.

The picture showed a strikingly beautiful woman with fine eyes. It was remarked to "Douglas" that the eyes showed something of a temper and he once replied: "Yes, you should see them when they flashed."

"Douglas" told his friends to whom he showed the picture that the woman was now a widow. He said the picture was taken in a New York studio and he was going to have it reproduced. At the studio it was said to-day there was no record of such a picture.

WROTE TO HOE AND GOT LET-TERS TO HOE.

Another peculiar circumstance in the case became known to-day. Investigation has shown that Cruikshank, after his disappearance, wrote to some one in Potsdam, N. Y., addressing his letters to A. T. Hoe. It develops that he also received letters under the name of A. T. Hoe at his Church street office.

Attorney Lowen E. Ginn was asked to-day about the report that Mrs. Cruikshank was about to bring proceedings for a divorce. Mr. Ginn has acted here as Mrs. Cruikshank's counsel.

"I don't think Mrs. Cruikshank has any idea of applying for a divorce," said Mr. Ginn. "I think there will be a reconciliation, if anything. I don't think Cruikshank is coming back."

On the other hand, A. T. Hoe, who was associated with "Douglas" at No. 30 Church street, believes Cruikshank is on his way back to New York on the steamship Caracas, which is due here Thursday. He would say nothing as to the source of his information. When a question was put to another of Cruikshank's associates, this answer was given:

"Wait until Cruikshank is here Friday. Then he can answer for himself."

LIGHTNING STRIKES LINER AS BIG WAVE CRASHES OVER HER

Pretoria Arrives Four Days
Late, After Desperate Battle With Fierce Storm.

Wrenched and battered by a three days' battle with one of the worst winter storms on record, the Hamburg-American liner Pretoria crept into port from Hamburg to-day four days late. She brought a thrilling story of disaster in the heart of a northwest storm, flooded engine rooms, injured passengers and imminent danger of foundering such as has not been matched by another trans-Atlantic ship this season.

The Pretoria left Hamburg Jan. 11 with an empty first cabin, eighty second and sixty stateroom passengers. From the moment she dug her bows into the Atlantic trouble began. The seas were mountainous and the winds heavy and shifting, but all went well until Jan. 14, when the Pretoria ran squarely into the teeth of the fiercest northwest blow her officers say they ever encountered.

The storm was something of a phenomenon for winter gale. It was accompanied by lightning and thunder and great hailstones, driven by a fierce wind, cut gashes in the faces of the sailors. With the storm came seas of terrible size. One of these monstrous waves fell solidly on the Pretoria's deck washing away two of the lifeboats and flooding the engine room. At the same moment lightning struck and splintered the foremast.

With her engines flooded, the Pretoria drifted off with the storm, almost a helpless hulk. Sea anchors were flung over the bow to keep her nose to the storm, and the passengers, panic-stricken, were forced into their staterooms and commanded to stay there, while officers and stewards stood guard to see the order was obeyed. The wave that had caused the damage sent three of the second cabin passengers plunging head first down the companionway. They were Mrs. Margaret Lundell, who sustained a severe scalp laceration and a broken nose; Henry Wolf, who had his shoulder broken; and John Schmiede, who suffered a broken arm. Nearly every passenger on the ship received severe bruises from the battering shock of the giant roller. All night and the following day the Pretoria drifted helplessly with the storm. When the gale moderated and the engine room had been pumped clear of water it was found the ship had been blown its mile out of her course.

During the worst of the storm a freight steamer appeared, about half a mile away. The freighter had no wireless but wig-wagged a message to the disabled liner, saying she would stand by until the weather moderated.

Capt. Dugge of the Pretoria signalled the freighter her aid would not be necessary, but the friendly vessel stayed near at hand until she saw the Pretoria had steamed up again and was able to make headway against the storm. Dr. Muller, the ship's surgeon, had more than his hands full attending to the bruised and frightened passengers. He was aided by a passenger, Dr. William McCurry, on his way home to Texas with his wife and daughter.

ACCUSES TWO COPS OF ATTACKING HIM

Investigation Begun of Boes's Complaint That He Was Beaten and Shot.

A police investigation was begun to-day of the shooting of Joseph Boes, twenty years old, of No. 303 Eastern Boulevard, the Bronx, early Sunday morning, Jan. 11. The Boes family complained Joseph was "tossed by policemen" and then shot. Inspector Farrel has called upon Capt. McQuay for a full report of the matter. Boes is confined to his bed with a bullet wound in the side of his right leg and severe bruises about his body and head. According to Boes's story he was in Edward Hart's Hotel, Bradford Avenue and Port Jervis street, the morning of the trouble. He was scuffling with Mrs. Hart, the wife of the proprietor, and says he accidentally pushed her against a door opening into the kitchen and knocked her down. In the kitchen, he says, were three policemen, two of whom he recognized. These two, he says, were Policemen Walsh and Kelly. Boes says Mrs. Hart called upon the policeman to hit him and they beat him with their clubs. He says he finally got out into the street, followed by Policemen Kelly who, he says, drew a revolver and fired four shots. One of the bullets took effect in Boes's leg. Boes says he fell unconscious in the gutter. John Deering, a companion of Boes, was arrested by Policemen Kelly, charged with disorderly conduct. He was fined $2 in the Westchester Police Court. Deering substantiates Boes's story of the fight in the hotel. Edward Hart, the hotel man, denies Boes was assaulted in his place. CONGRESS CALLS KNOX IN "SECRET FUND" PROBE. WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—Secretary Knox was served with a subpoena at the Capitol to-day to appear before the House Committee on State Department expenditures this afternoon to explain the "secret fund" expenditures for the Lake Champlain Centennial celebration in 1900.
